4TH ANNUAL CONVENTION ANTI-HORSE THIEF ASS'N.

As early as Tuesday noon delegates began to arrive for the 4th annual convention of the Indian Territory Grand Lodge of the Anti-Horse Thief Association. By Wednesday noon it was estimated near 500 delegates were in attendance.

This grand lodge comprises 336 local lodges scattered over the Five Civilized Tribes. It will be remembered that about one year ago a similar body convened in Ada. That was the Oklahoma division which laps over on the Indian Territory to some extent, but it is not fully affiliated with the National organization.

At 9:30 Wednesday morning the convention was called to order by President McKellop and the opening ode was sung. In highly appreciated words Mayor J. P. Wood then welcomed the delegates to the city. The mayors welcome was happily responded to by Fred Moore of Muskogee. He was followed by U. S. Commissioner U. G. Winn who made every delegate feel at home.

The usual committees were then appointed, as follows: Committee on credentials, E. C. Sullivan, Fred Moore, W. H. Richards. Committee on Resolutions: W. H. Jackson, of Waynetta; G. W. Francis, of Claremore; A. H. Page, of Big Cabin. Committee on Grievances: A. A. Collins, of Afton; S. L. Hamilton, of Stigler; F. M. Ingram, of Ada.

It was decided to have the grand parade Thursday afternoon, starting at the court house at 1:30 o'clock. Sam H. Hargis was appointed chief grand marshal with G. C. Elliott and L. T. Raines as assistants. E. L. Durbin was named as grand guard. Adjournment was then taken till afternoon.

At the afternoon session, while the report of the credentials committee was awaited, the delegates were regaled with an eloquent address by Judge Henry M. Furman. Also J. W. Wall of Kansas, national president of the association, was called out and gave expression to some very timely words of encouragement.

The credentials committee, having found the certificates quite voluminous, reported advocating simply the adoption of the secretary's roll so far as

WHERE THEY SPEAK SATURDAY NIGHT

Speakers have been assigned for Democratic meetings Saturday night, Oct. 27th, as follows:

practicable. The suggestion was adopted, after which a motion prevailed that the password be taken up and the body go into executive session.

A. P. McKellop, of Muskogee, president; W. H. A. Harrison, Checotah, secretary-treasurer. Executive committee: J. W. Duncan, Tahlequah; T. B. Adair, Holdenville; J. W. Stringer, Tyrola. Constitutional committee: W. A. Ricketts, Broken Arrow; John H. French, Collinsville; another, name not learned.

James Kirkwood, president of the Oklahoma division, is among the visitors; also W. W. Graves, publisher of "The Anti News," the order's official paper, is here from St. Paul, Kan. J. A. Kiphart, of Collinsville, is serving as assistant secretary.

The United States court room is crowded with enthusiastic delegates and this bids fair to be a memorably successful convention of the A. H. T. A.

PROSPECTIVE CHANGES IN ROOSEVELT'S CABINET

Washington, Oct. 24.—The following statement regarding prospective changes in President Roosevelt's Cabinet was made public at the White House tonight:

Secretary of the Treasury—George B. Cortelyou.

Postmaster General—Charles Von L. Meyer.

Attorney General—Charles G. Bonaparte.

Secretary of the Navy—Victor H. Metcalf.

Secretary of Commerce and Labor—Oscar S. Straus.

The general understanding has been for some time that Attorney General Moody will retire on the first of the coming January and that Secretary Shaw will follow him on the 14th of March.

On the first of the year therefore Mr. Bonaparte, who is now Secretary of the Navy, will succeed Mr. Moody as Attorney General, and he in turn will be succeeded by Mr. Metcalf, Secretary of Commerce and Labor, the latter place being filled by Mr. Straus.

Mr. Cortelyou now Postmaster General, will take Mr. Shaw's place on the 14th of March, at which time Mr. Meyer is to become Postmaster General.

The changes contemplate the introduction of two new men in the Cabinet Mr. Meyer and Mr. Straus.

Mr. Meyer who will become Postmaster General, is Ambassador to Russia, to which place he was appointed March 6, 1904, having been promoted to that office following his service as ambassador to Italy from 1900 to 1905. He is a native of Massachusetts and has been well known as a business man.

The appointment of Mr. Straus caused considerable surprise, as it was the first case where a citizen of the Hebrew faith has been made a member of the President's Cabinet. He was born Dec. 3 1850, and is well known as a merchant, diplomat and author. He represented the United States as minister to Turkey on two different occasions and was appointed by President Roosevelt to fill the vacancy caused by the death of ex-president Harrison as a member of the permanent court of arbitration at The Hague.

QUEEN STILL A QUESTION OF WHO

From the decided changes made in the standing of the different candidates from day to day and the inclination to nominate new contestants for the honor of Queen of the Carnival and the most popular Lady in Ada it is impossible at this early date to even surmise as to who is likely to win.

Miss Lela Chapman has the lead this afternoon by 28 votes, but the standing of the other contestants as shown by the last count shows what amount of interest is being manifested by each one.

Today's count is as follows:

Lela Chapman	355
Mary Houghten	355
Alice Harris	282
Jessie Hinds	280
Essie Russell	185
Mrs. Orville Sneed	150

AMOS HAYS DANGEROUSLY STABBED BY HIS NEPHEW

Early Tuesday night Amos Hays, Chickasaw senator, who lives near Ada, received a dangerous knife wound at the hands of Dan Hays, his nephew. The difficulty took place about dark in the "Indian joint" the building formerly used as the city hall. The story of the tragedy as told by an eye witness is this: Amos and Dan were standing near each other at the bar. Several times Amos asked Dan to set 'em up,' to which the latter would reply, "all right."

Finally Amos asked, "Are you afraid of me?" For answer Dan slashed at him with an open pocket knife which cut an ugly wound along the side of Amos' throat, narrowly missing the jugular vein. The flow of blood was alarmingly copious, yet with typical Indian stoicism Amos knocked around town sometime before seeking surgical attention.

It was found necessary to take twenty odd stitches in the wound.

The assailant was promptly arrested by City Marshal Mitchell and then turned over to the U. S. Marshal force. It is said not the best of feeling has existed between Amos and his nephew for several years.

The wounded man was able to go home last night and return to town this morning.

HOBSON WILL SPEND TEN DAYS ON SPEAKING TOUR

Oklahoma City, Oct., 24.—W. D. Cardwell, chairman of the speakers' bureau of the democratic state committee, announced yesterday that he had secured the services of Capt. Richmond Pearson Hobson, of Merrimac fame, for a ten days' speaking tour in the territories in the interest of the democratic cause.

Captain Hobson has visited the territories several times in the past and delivered lectures before various Chatauqua assemblies, and has many warm friends and admirers, particularly in the Indian Territory. His itinerary as now arranged is as follows: Thursday, October 25, Copan, I. T.; Friday, October 26, Bartlesville; Saturday, October 27, Lenopah; Monday, October 29, Tahlequah; Tuesday, October 30, 1 p. m., Okmulgee; Tuesday, October 30, 8 p. m., Henryetta; Wednesday, October 31, 2 p. m., Weleetka; Wednesday, October 31, 8 p. m., Ada; Thursday, November 1, 2 p. m., Atoka; Thursday, November 1, 8 p. m., Caddo; Friday, November 2, 2 p. m., Hugo; Friday, November 2, 8 p. m., Boswell; Saturday, November 3, 3 p. m., Antlers.

Died

Nolen, the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Letzman of North Broadway, died this morning about 7:30 after a lingering illness.

The young parents have the deepest sympathy of their friends, and while their griefs are inconsolable they have the inexpressible satisfaction of knowing that:

"The opening bud is to Heaven conveyed,
And bade to blossom there."

RICHMOND PEARSON HOBSON

It is a high compliment to the citizenship of this section that we are to secure Richmond Pearson Hobson for a political address the night of the 31st. Our thanks are due the Speakers Bureau of democratic headquarters for this wise selection.

Hobson first became famous thru his heroic conduct in sinking the Merri-mac during the Spanish war. Later when he essayed the lecture platform and politics there were little critics who attempted to ridicule him in these high civilian roles. But those of these critics who have any sense have shut up now. He has demonstrated himself no mere war hero of fleeting popularity, but one capable of heroic conduct in times of peace, a man with talents of the genuine statesman stamp. He who could defeat that veteran congressman, J. H. Bankhead, for the democratic nomination from the Sixth Alabama District—a nomination tantamount to election—such a man must be classed high above the ordinary.

In fact Mr. Hobson is a brilliant orator and a profound thinker. Everybody in this district who can should hear him; they will hear a young statesman who is going to be listened to in the halls of congress.

COMPARISON OF CAMPAIGNERS

How striking is the contrast between the reception accorded Vice-president Fairbanks Tuesday and that usually accorded William Jennings Bryan.

The people recognized Mr. Fairbanks as a great man, a distinguished officer of the nation, and they greeted him with the cordiality and the awe due to the dignity of his station. Yet they knew the purpose of his visit was to make votes for the republican party, and with that enterprise the masses could not sympathize.

Though Mr. Fairbanks is one of the greatest and best men in his party, full well the people know that dominant in his party are plutocratic influences—influences ever at war against the rights of the people. The goodness of Fairbanks is the goodness of blindness, the goodness of him who thinks himself clean because he comes not in contact with the blackened pots upon which his pedestal rests, of him who tries to be oblivious of plutocracy's supremacy in the control of his party. With the weight of its own corruption this party is tottering from power. Therefore it is not surprising that our people made no great demonstration on the occasion of the vice-president's coming.

How different are the demonstrations attending Mr. Bryan's tours. Every where he is received with the greatest and most spontaneous enthusiasm. And for the reason that the long plundered people recognize in him an implacable enemy of gilded greed, a dependable deliverer from the evils the toiling millions today are writhing under. They know that he is strong; that he is courageous; that he is neither tied to nor tainted with the money power; that he is immaculately clean and absolutely sincere.

Our Guest.

(Lines written on the coming of Hon. Charles Warren Fairbanks.)

We set our clocks to ring at six
To wake us from our dreams,
That we might go down to the train
To see what could be seen.
We dreaded not the cold, damp air
That chilled us to the bone;
We went to bid him welcome to
Our southern Indian home.
We stood around and waited for
The train to bring him on,
And when it did pull in at last
We wished we had not gone.
It was a gaudy, crazy thing,
Built just for men with gold,
And not at all like Pa rode on
In simple days of old.
It had so many little nooks
And crooks and corners rare,
It almost took an acrobat
To get about in there.
They don't make cars like that out here;
It ne'er would do for such as we
To ride in such a car.
So Fairbanks came and spoke to us
And dined a la Parnell;
But what he ate and how he ate
No one outside could tell.
He ate an awful long, long time
At this morning repast,
But bye and bye the crowd made way
And out he came at last.
He spoke to us. We lingered on
Each word he had to say;
He said full fifty words in all,
And then he went away!
He said he was surprised to see
A country here so fine;
In swift development it had
Left other states behind.
He said the dear old g. o. p.
Has made her what she is,
Had brought us happy, prosperous times
By 'tending to our "bis."
That all we had to do to help
These prosperous times along
Was just to vote the g. o. p.
And sing its campaign song.
And thus did Fairbanks

Come!!!
—Poet Lariat of Ada.

To the Voters of District No. 87:

Notice is hereby given that in Constitutional delegate District No. 87, the Republican, Democratic and Socialist parties have nominated the below named persons respectively as candidates for the office for delegate to form a constitutional convention for the proposed state of Oklahoma, and that the names of said candidates will appear upon the official ballots under the title and device and in the order, as follows:

In order to vote any one of the foregoing tickets the voter should enter the election room and announce his name to the two clerks of election, one of whom will deliver to him one ballot, and the other will hand him a stamp. The voter shall then without leaving the room, enter an unoccupied booth and indicate the candidate for whom he desires to vote by stamping a cross in the circle above, or in the square immediately to the left of such candidate's name, after which and before leaving the booth, he shall fold his ballot so that no part of the printed matter thereon will be exposed, and shall return the stamp to the clerk from whom he received it and deliver the ballot to the chairman, who shall forthwith, in the presence of the voter, judges of election and watchers deposit the same in the ballot box. Any other mark than the cross-mark for the purpose of voting, or any erasure made on the ballot, makes it void and it can not be counted.

OVERDRAFTS

It is becoming well known by business men that overdrafts, whether large or small, are not approved by the comptroller of the currency. The large central banks allow overdrafts only in a very small way, and this, it matters not how small, is not approved by the powers that be. This unbusinesslike habit of overdrafts grew out of advancing on moving products, such as cotton, grain and fat stock on the move. The overdraft system is wrong and the man whose account is always overdrawn is the man who spends more money than he makes and will finally have no bank account.

"The Sweetest Girl in Dixie" is in a class by itself, it is so unlike the other plays of the South we have seen. Perhaps Miss Slemmons, who is a Southern woman, has been a little partial to her own people, for she has certainly pictured them as the most charming people in the world. But even the most carping critic can find no fault with this dainty play. It is a genuine treat after a season of melodrama. —Des Moines Leader.

It is with regret that we realize that in a few years these types will have passed away, and the coming generations will know them only in story and song.

R. M. Brown, wife and baby of Center passed through Ada on their way to Stonewall to visit relatives.

There are no people in the world who have been so universally made the theme of story and song, as the people of Dixie land. The steady march of commercialism is fast driving romance from us, but the Southland will be slow to yield to the invader. For it is the home of chivalry, the home of fair women and brave men, the place where the sun shines brightest, the moonlight is clearest; where the women speak softest, the men love strongest and fight quickest; that is Dixie Land. —At the opera house Thursday, Oct 25th. SEED CORN—ITS HARVESTING AND STORING

Careful Selection Will Insure Increased Yield Next Year—
By G. I. Christie, B. S. A., Indiana Experiment Station.

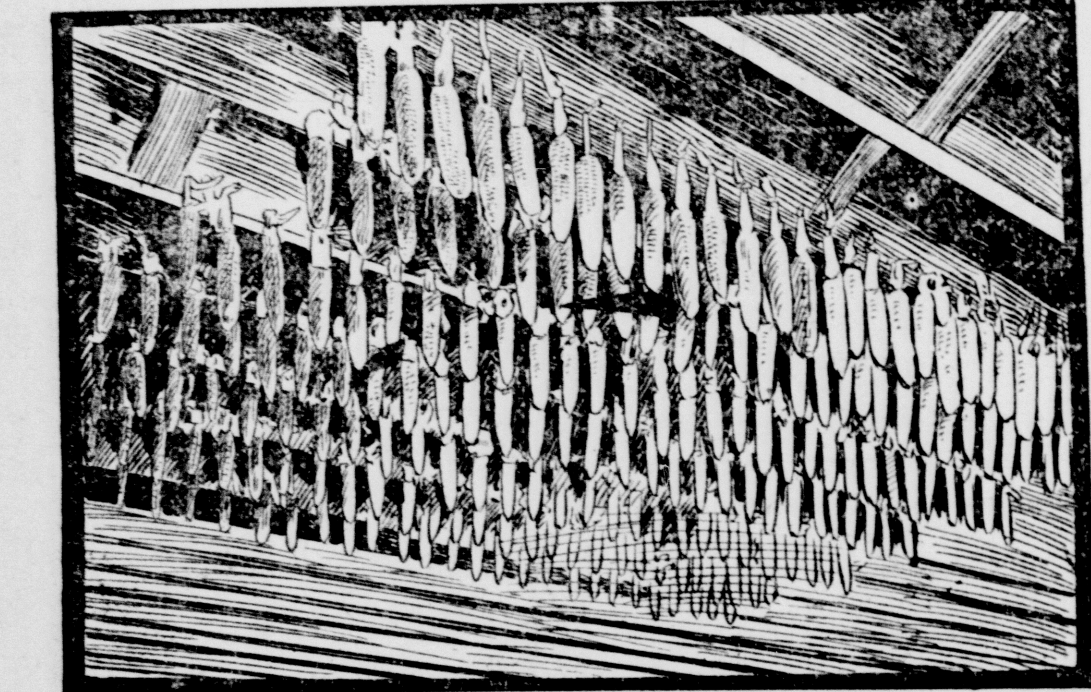

In the seven states classed as the central west, more than 46,000,000 acres of land are planted to corn annually. Allowing one bushel of seed for each seven acres, about 6,630,000 bushels of seed corn are required to plant this area. Now when we realize that the stand, yield and quality of corn depends in a large measure on the seed used, we can readily appreciate the importance of care and attention in securing good seed corn. Investigations show that much poor seed corn has resulted from a lack of care in the harvesting and storing. Too little attention has been given to these points by seedsmen and corn growers, and the result is that the corn growers suffer an enormous loss each year. The loss this year to the farmers of Indiana from this source alone will amount to many thousands of dollars.

Corn should be allowed to mature thoroughly before being picked. Corn picked when immature does not contain all the plant food intended for it, and consequently has the vitality weakened. When gathered before it is fully matured the seed is difficult to preserve. When dried in a warm place it is liable to sprout, and unless there is a good circulation of air it will become heated and mouldy. During the average season, heavy frosts may be expected during the last part of October and early part of November. At this time the corn on the stalk contains a high per cent.

A Good Way to Dry Seed Corn.

of moisture and a few degrees of frost will injure the vitality. Therefore the best time to gather seed corn is when it is thoroughly matured and before the heavy frosts.

A plan to be recommended and a feasible one is that of going through the field or "seed corn patch" after the corn has matured and before the general harvest, and selecting the seed from the stalk. The plan of selecting seed at the time of general harvest is objectionable because of the fact that many times the work is done late in the season, and at this time, in the hurry, the care of the seed corn is apt to be neglected.

Convenient Corn Storage Racks.

When seed corn is selected in the field the parent stalk can be studied. Experiments have shown this to be a very important part in the production of high grade corn. The stalks from which seed ears are selected should be of medium size, strong at the base, tapering gradually to the tassel, and should have a large leaf development, as the leaf is the laboratory of the plant. The stalk should also stand erect and be free from smut or insect attack. Stalks with suckers are objectionable. Always select ears of good size and quality, which have straight rows of regular sized kernels and which most nearly represent the type desired. These ears should be at a convenient height of four and one-half to five feet on the stalks and should be attached to the stalk by a shank medium in length and strength. The ear when matured should break over and hang with the tip downward.

Ears in an upright position are objectionable owing to the fact that they are more or less subjected to the rains and hot sun, which injures the vitality. Experiments carried on at the Illinois station show that seed from ears high on the stalk and in an upright position yielded almost ten bushels less corn per acre than did seed from ears hanging in the natural position. Experiments also proved that the ears growing high on the stalk and in an upright position, when planted, gave stalks a very high per cent. of which bore ears in a similar manner.

For the reasons that ears so located are inconvenient to harvest, have low vitality and low producing power, they should never be selected for seed.

Perhaps there is no way in which corn is injured more than through improper storing. Corn as it comes from the field contains a high per cent. of moisture, and if subjected to a high or low temperature will be materially injured. Too many people overlook this fact, and the result is that we have large quantities of seed corn with low vitality.

RESULTS OF GERMINATION TESTS.

Seed corn stored in crib	No. ears tested	Percent perfect	Percent failed

Seed corn stored in drying racks....	308 98	2

The above table gives the results of germination tests made at the Purdue experiment station. A test of five kernels from each individual ear was made.

The most critical time in the handling of seed corn is the first month after it has been picked. Owing to the large amount of moisture contained by the corn at the time of harvest it is necessary to store it in a dry, well ventilated place and in such a way that each ear will be exposed to a free circulation of air. Seed corn should always be stored in the ear, but never in barrels, boxes or sacks, or above large quantities of grain.

A satisfactory method and one adopted by many farmers is to tie eight or ten ears in a string with binding twine, and hang them in an open shed where the sun will not shine on them, but where the air can circulate freely about them. Another plan is to tie the ears together in pairs and hang them over a wire. By these methods the ears will be allowed to dry out rapidly and they will be free of the danger of heavy frosts in November and early December.

A method used by a large number of seedsmen is that shown in our illustration. These racks may be built in any room, and are convenient and very satisfactory.

Love in a Motor-Car.

By RALPH HENRY BARBOUR.

Hubbard shifted to the low speed and drew up in front of the hotel steps. There was a lively outfit there already, but Hubbard shouted it out of the way and took his place at the entrance. Hubbard's sole companion, Billy Stone, climbed out of the car carefully and sprang up the steps.

As Hubbard calmly lighted a cigarette a very charming voice rippled from the steps. He glanced around, prepared, in fact rather anxious, to have his senses ravished by visions of feminine loveliness, and he was not disappointed. A girl all in white came down the steps. At the lowest step she turned and Hubbard saw that she was accompanied by two older ladies.

"You and auntie had better sit back, Mrs. Perry," directed the girl in a rippling voice. "I'm going to get in front."

Hubbard stared. Around to the back went the trio. Bill Stone had left the door open and in climbed the stoutest of the three. It speaks well for Hubbard's presence of mind that he was out on the ground like a shot and was helping the second of the elderly pair into the car before the exhaust had chugged thrice.

"Where to, please, miss?" asked Hubbard, trying to look as much like a chauffeur as possible.

"Didn't they tell you at the stable?" she asked, settling herself in the front seat by his side. "We want to go over to Magnolia to the Oceanview."

"I thought it was Magnolia," he said promptly, as the car shot forward, missed the telegraph pole by three inches and shot down the hill, "but I like to be sure, you know."

"You needn't think I'm frightened; I've gone twice as fast as this old car ever could go, but I don't like hills."

"Well, for a lively car, miss, this one can hike along quite smartly," he said, deferentially. "And when we get over on the Magnolia road I'll let her out, if you like."

"Thank you," she answered indifferently, wondering the while why she should want to make a good impression on this chauffeur, and feeling rather contemptible because she did, "I should like to see what it can do."

Really he didn't look the least bit in the world like a hired motor car man, she thought. And he had three awfully interesting looking rings on his sun-burned hands. Then, too, he was frightfully handsome, with stunning features and steely eyes and an expression that suggested calm fearlessness, capability and—yes, positively—audacity.

Oh, Billy Said That, Did He? Good for Billy!

She dropped her eyes, felt a blush creeping into her cheeks and broke into rather incoherent questions as to the process of drying and salting fish. He didn't know a great deal about it himself, but what he told her was undeniably interesting even if it sometimes ran wide of the facts. By the time they were rumbling through Gloucester each was very much interested in the other.

At the Oceanview, to the crowded veranda of which fashionable hostelry he swung up dashing at break-neck speed, the ladies alighted and he was instructed to wait for them while they made a call.

An hour later—when they had threaded their way skillfully down the drive—she asked:

"Have you been doing this long?"

"Doing—?"

"Running automobiles," she explained.

"Oh, yes, I have—about three years."

"Are you—are you making a profession of it?"

"Well, to an extent, yes," he replied; at least that was about his mother's idea of it, he reflected amusedly.

She asked questions about the machine, and Hubbard did his best to be interesting, and was so successful that when they were once more inhaling the aroma of drying fish she was almost sorry.

"I wish," he ventured when the end was in sight, "I wish you would allow me to take you out again before long. You see, there's lots worth seeing."

She turned and held a hurried consultation with the others. Then,

"Could you come for us to-morrow afternoon?" she asked.

"Yes, miss. At what time?"

She agreed to say two.

Hubbard was relieved to find that Stone was not in sight about the hotel when they drew up. If only Billy could be kept out of the way!

The next afternoon the big blue car well chugged up to the Harborside.

Hubbard waited ten minutes, and then, just as he had decided to send word to the ladies, his heart gave a bound. Through the front door stepped the girl. It was all right! He leaped out of the car, raised his cap and—found himself staring at Billy Stone.

There he stood, smiling at the car and pulling the end of his ridiculous brown mustache. Hubbard groaned. But—well, he would carry it off as best he might. He tried to get Billy's eye, but Billy wouldn't look. What did it mean?

"The others aren't coming to-day," said Miss Carson. "And so you can drive it as fast as you like. Can't he, Billy?"

"Certainly," answered Billy, but without enthusiasm. Hubbard ground his teeth over the "Billy," it sounded so very chummy! He bowed and held out his hand to help her into the front seat, but she drew back, stifling a little smile, and:

"I shall sit back to-day," she said, with dignity. "Come on, Billy."

Well, they went to Rockport and they came home again. It was a very uninteresting ride.

When they rolled into Gloucester Miss Carson asked him to stop at one of the stores for a moment. She alighted and Billy announced his intention of seeking a book store and buying some magazines. Hubbard felt instinctively that he had gone for candy. He waited glumly. But almost instantly Miss Carson returned.

"They haven't got what I want," she said, despairingly.

"If you will get in," said Hubbard, "I will take you to another store around the corner. They have everything there."

"But Mr. Stone?"

"We'll come back for him."

"We'll, all right," she consented.

As they passed the next corner there was a hail and Hubbard had a fleeting glimpse of Billy Stone, his arms piled high with packages.

"Isn't the store a long way off?" she inquired uneasily, when they had left the main street and were speeding up a hill.

"Some little distance," answered Hubbard.

"Where are we going, please?" she asked presently, with cold dignity.

"Anisquam. It's about three miles over here. It's very interesting, Miss Carson."

"Mr. Hubbard?"

"Yes?" But he didn't look around.

"I want you to turn instantly and go back to Gloucester!"

"Not until you've promised to go out riding with me the day after to-morrow and every second day thereafter during your stay here and in the mountains."

"What? Are you crazy?"

"No, Miss Carson, not at all."

"Then what do you mean?" she demanded, "by asking me such a thing? Take me home at once. If you don't I shall call for help."

Hubbard stirred uneasily. She was taking it much worse than he had expected her to. Something was wrong somewhere.

"The ideal!" she continued scathingly. "I shall report you to your employer!"

He turned and looked at her in bewilderment.

"My employer?"

"Certainly. I shall tell them at the stable how you have forcibly compelled me to listen to your insults and—"

"I beg your pardon, but hasn't Billy told you?"

"Billy? Mr. Stone? Told me what?" she asked more quietly, somewhat impressed by his expression and manner.

"Miss Carson, I'm going to make a clean breast of it and throw myself on your mercy," he said. And he did so, to her mingled confusion and mirth. When he had finished—

"And Billy lied, didn't he?" she asked, thoughtfully.

"Well, Billy wasn't taking any chances."

"What do you mean?" she asked, innocently.

"I mean that Billy didn't want anyone to help him at his job."

"Job? What job?"

"Admiring you, Miss Carson."

"Oh! I—now can't we turn back?"

"Of course. I have your promise?"

"Don't be foolish!"

"But have I?"

"Mr. Hubbard, it is very, very late."

"And it's getting later."

"You're awfully mean!"

"And I'm getting meaner."

He turned and surprised a smile on her lips.

"You're awfully silly—and stubborn," she laughed.

"Well, I'm stubborn, I'll grant you. And unless you want to see Anisquam from top to bottom, and portions of Bay View, and Lanesville, and—"

"Oh, stop, please! I—I promise!"

The machine stopped instantly.

"Thank you," he said earnestly. His right hand swooped down on one of hers and squeezed it ecstatically.

"There!" she said to herself, with a gasp, as they swung around and started homeward in the face of a glorious sunset, "I knew all along he was just that sort!"

But she didn't seem to care.

MALARIAL FEVER IN HORSES NEARLY ALWAYS FATAL

A Practical Treatise by Dr. A. T. Peters, of University of Nebraska.

This disease is also called "swamp fever" by farmers, and "pernicious anaemia" by veterinarians. In Nebraska many of the farmers call the disease "typhoid fever," for it resembles this fever very much. The manner in which the disease is contracted by horses is not definitely understood. In the last few years the veterinarians in the Philippines have discovered a disease, prevalent in India under the name of "surra," the description of which corresponds much to that of malarial fever of horses in this country.

The disease usually starts with a fever of the recurrent type. Following this is the symptom of weakness. They apparently have no life and perform their usual work with great difficulty. The mucous membranes of the mouth and eyes become very pale. After the animals have shown these symptoms for a few days one will notice a staggering gait. They become weak over the loins, so that farmers suspect some kidney trouble. They drag their legs. During these first symptoms the horses do not apparently lose their appetite, eating ravenously, but growing thinner and weaker all the time. The temperature becomes more elevated, running as high as 103 to 106 degrees. The variation in temperature is one of the characteristic symptoms. It may remain high for several days, and then drop down, only to rise again. In this condition of changing temperature the horses become too weak to work. They lose flesh very rapidly and are usually laid off from work. It may occur that the animal will improve for a week or ten days, only to have another attack more severe than the first one. Horses may have two or three attacks, and death finally follows, either from heart failure or from exhaustion. The ranchmen in Nebraska have observed that when they feed their horses all they want while they the surface membrane of the eye. As the disease advances, the color of these spots becomes darker, resembling that in mortification, and gives the observer a very good index of the progress of the case. Whenever these spots are found on the mucous membrane of the eye, the case almost always proves fatal. Another marked symptom is the increase of the urine. Large quantities of urine are secreted. This is also a serious symptom.

This disease is not very difficult to diagnose, at least, not in the latter stages of the disease. In the early stages it may be mistaken for influenza or pneumonia, but when one has seen a case in the advanced stages, then it is not so difficult. However, it is well for one who is experienced to defer judgment until the animal has been examined two or three times on that many days. If one takes into consideration the good appetite with continual loss of flesh, the pale mucous membranes, and the peculiar pulse, he can diagnose without much trouble.

Prognosis.—The prognosis of this disease is very unfavorable. Some ranchmen and veterinarians claim that the death rate runs from 50 to 75 per cent., while others claim even a higher percentage. The writer is of the opinion that a very small per cent. of the animals recover. We have observed that where farmers have carefully nursed their animals they appear to recover, only to have another attack which seemed to be more severe, death finally resulting. The writer has never seen a thoroughly cured animal since he has observed this disease.

Laboratory experiments and cultures were made from the contents of the spleen, blood, kidneys and urine. These cultures were inoculated into smaller animals, but without any results.

The treatment of this disease has not been very satisfactory, which is largely due to the fact that we have no definite knowledge as to the true

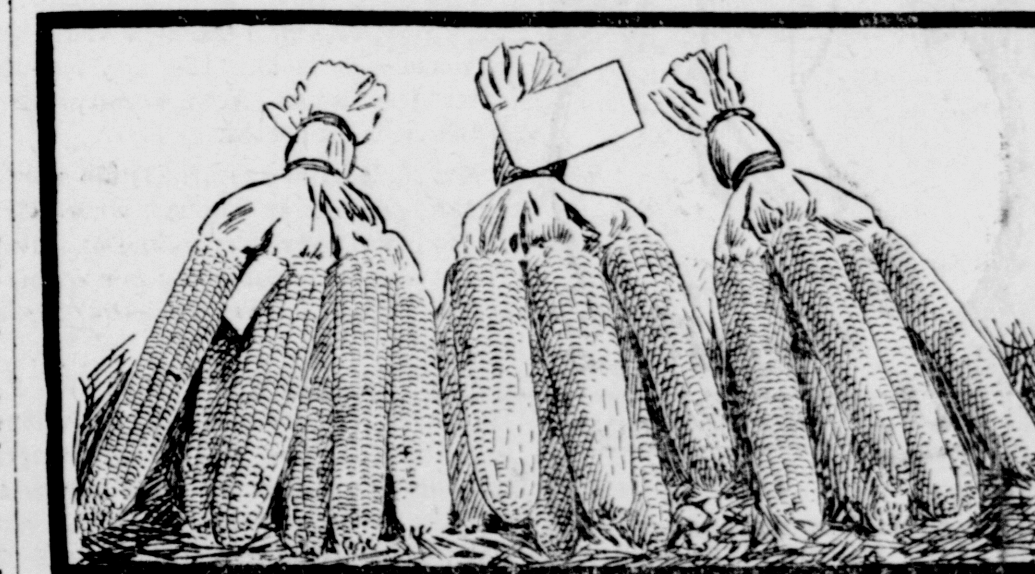

Progress of the Disease.

are sick with this disease, death is certain, but that if they feed them sparingly they may recover, but usually have another attack. In the early stages of the disease the pulse is always very rapid, while in the latter stages it is very weak. Horses may linger with this disease for several months. As a rule, horses live from two to three weeks. It is only occasionally that animals recover. Besides the above symptoms, there is a swelling of the legs. This is a symptom that is not always observed, and only when in the latter stages of the disease. This swelling may also be noticed under the abdomen. The swelling indicates a very poor circulation, and is a very bad symptom. There are also found petechiae (little blood spots) on the mucous membranes. These are especially found on cause of the disease. The treatment consisted in using gasoline, creolin and cresote to cleanse out the stomach and the intestinal parasites. In addition to this, fever remedies were used, such as quinine, nux vomica, digitalis and the like, followed up with a general tonic, such as Fowler's solution, but with no universal success.

At this time the station is giving attention to the method by which these animals become infected. Possibly it may be in the same way that sheep and cattle become infected with the small parasite known as the stomach worm. Embryos of worms have been found on blades of grass, and are taken up by stock when grazing. As soon as the definite cause of infection has been learned, then possibly a cure may be forthcoming.

A Good Way of Exhibiting Prize Corn

In selecting corn for exhibit at a state or local fair, farmers should take only perfect and uniform ears. Frequently corn is ruined for exhibition purposes by being handled carelessly. One of the neatest ways of showing small lots of corn that we have seen is shown above. This was a first prize lot grown, selected and put up by an Ohio correspondent of the American Agriculturist. Here is a hint for farmers in general and the suggestion may prove helpful. The husks are turned back and tied as represented in the picture.
